F. N. CONRAD ELECTED PRESIDENT OF FLORIDA BANKERS' ASSOCIATION

After selecting St. Augustine as the meeting place for 1917, and electing F. N. Conrad, of Daytona, as president for the ensuing year, the twenty-third annual session of the Florida Bankers' association drew to a close at the Hotel Clarendon this afternoon.

St. Augustine, Miami and Tampa were aspirants as the next meeting place, but, after a spirited discussion the question resolved itself into a vote-cast between the contenders for the three cities and St. Augustine was unanimously selected.

Mr. Conrad was elected without opposition, after which other officers were elected as follows:

First vice-president, Forrest Lake, president of the Seminole County bank, of Sanford.

Second vice-president, G. B. Lamar, vice-president of the First National bank of St. Augustine.

Third vice-president, G. G. Ware, cashier of the Citizens Bank of Leesburg.

Fourth vice-president, E. L. Wirt.

Fifth vice-president, R. W. Goodhart, of Pensacola.

Secretary and treasurer, Geo. R. DeSousa, vice-president Barnett National bank, of Jacksonville.

Executive committee: Giles L. Wilson, Jacksonville; A. P. Anthony, Jacksonville; Dr. L. A. Bize, Tampa; C. W. Lamar, Pensacola; C. A. Hades, Live Oak.

Legislative committee: H. G. Airl, Jacksonville; Geo. E. Lewis, Tallahassee; W. R. McQuaid, Jacksonville.

The morning session opened with an interesting talk by J. A. Evans, of Washington, D. C., assistant chief of the United States Department of Agriculture, States Relation service.

Mr. Evans urged diversified farming, and predicted that the day is not distant when Florida will be a great factor in the agriculture of the country.

Mr. Evans was followed by Dr. Niven, of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, with a talk on "Tick Eradication." The address was accompanied by chart illustrations, and the speaker thoroughly impressed upon his hearers the great benefits to be derived by the eradication of the cattle tick from Florida.

Dr. Leaverman, of Massachusetts, occupied the attention of the convention for a few moments, speaking in behalf of the league for the Enforcement of Permanent Peace.

The program address, "Present Day Banking in the South," was ably delivered by F. W. Foote, active vice-president of the First National bank of Commerce, of Hattiesburg, Miss.

The address of Mr. Foote was very comprehensive and he handled his subject in an exhaustive manner.

J. B. Pike, cashier of the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta, explained the reserve bank system. Mr. Pike's remarks were full of meat and his brief talk gave the bankers much interesting information.

After the reports of committees and routine business, the session closed, and this afternoon the visitors are the guests of local bankers on a drive to New Smyrna.

Tonight will occur the annual banquet, to be held at the Hotel Clarendon. Dr. Lincoln Hulley will act as emcee.

Dr. Blocker, of Stetson, who is known to his friends as "Uncle Dan," is in Daytona today and registered at the Magnolia hotel.

F. N. CONRAD
President Merchants' Bank, of Daytona, who was elected President of the Florida Bankers' Association This Afternoon.

E. G. TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION HOLDS CLOSING MEETING

The East Coast Teachers' association held the last meeting for the year this morning. A committee was appointed to draft resolutions of respect in regard to the death of B. E. Prevatt, a member of the county school board.

Interesting and helpful five-minute talks were given by Miss Hutchinson on "Outdoor Games," and by Mr. Turnquist on "Agriculture," a part of the high school course.

Dr. Blocker, of Stetson university, talked in his characteristic way on "Education As a Process and Not a Product."

Miss Carpenter, a story-teller, of Chatauqua fame, of Covington, Ky., favored the association with two stories.

There was a little interchange of good-byes between Prof. Sheppard and the association; he feels justly proud of the association and the association feels justly proud of him. He is doing much to lift the schools to a higher plane. The work of the organization has paid well for the time and exertion expended.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Plummer and little son, Silas, who had been occupying during the season, Louis Adler's residence at the corner of Magnolia and Palmetto avenues, departed this morning for their home in Holton, Me.

"SO LONG!"

AND NOW FAREWELL UNTIL NEXT SEASON.

With this issue the Daily News will cease publication until next fall. The Daily News has this season enjoyed the largest advertising patronage of its existence and its subscription list has far exceeded that of any other Daily paper in Volusia county.

It has ever been the aim of the publishers to give Daytona a live, up-to-date newspaper, making each season's issue better than the preceding one and the twelfth season has been no exception to this rule. This has been made possible by the generous advertising patronage accorded the paper by Daytona's most wide-awake business people and the untiring efforts of a large and efficient corps of employees. The Daily News appreciates the hearty support extended it in the past and will strive to merit a continuance of the same in the future and now to advertisers and readers all, farewell until next season.

NEW YORK IN GRIP OF DRIVING SNOW STORM

(By Eugene Jones, Special Daily News Correspondent.)

NEW YORK, April 8.—Snow started falling here this morning before daybreak, and the storm is still in progress. The temperature is 36 above zero. The storm has developed into a driving snow like midwinter weather.

SPECTACULAR AIR BATTLE RESULTS IN ITALIAN VICTORY

(By International News Service.)

ROME, April 8.—A night battle in the air above the Isonzo front has resulted in a victory for the Italians. The fight occurred in the glare of searchlights and star bombs. Two of the seven attacking Austrian aeroplanes were brought down by Italian airmen. The others fled.

ONE BRITISHER SUBMARINED; TWO OTHERS SUNK BY MINES

LONDON, April 8.—The British liner, Chantala, has been submarined, and the steamers, Braunton and Clyde, sunk by mines. The crews of the latter two were saved. No mention is made of the crew of the Chantala.

AMERICAN FORCES MAY WITHDRAW WITHOUT THE CAPTURE OF VILLA

(By International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, April 8.—That the American forces can and may be withdrawn from Mexico without capturing Villa was revealed today when General Scott, chief of staff, made public the original orders to General Funston directing the movement of troops to Mexico. The order contains this paragraph: "These troops will be withdrawn to American territory as soon as the defacto government of Mexico is able to relieve them of their work." In the absence of President Wilson and Secretary of War Baker, Secretary Tumulty denied that any change of policy is contemplated and intimated that the orders were made public to counteract the claims of a member of the Carranza cabinet that the provisional ruler is playing into the hands of the Americans.

PURSUIT OF VILLA HAS BEEN RESUMED BY AMERICAN FORCES

(By International News Service.)

EL PASO, April 8.—The pursuit of Villa, halted temporarily by lack of supplies, has been resumed south of Chihuahua City. The pursuit has carried the Americans to a point 40 miles north of Parrel. Reports indicate that Villa has covered his flight well, leaving small bands at intervals to fire on and delay the Americans, who, never knowing Villa was not with them, always gave chase. Interest here is divided between the chase and the plot to cause a Mexican uprising on the American side of the border. Nineteen are under arrest and the plot has been frustrated.

FIRST MEXICAN STATEMENT MADE ABOUT AMERICAN FORCES

(By International News Service.)

MEXICO CITY, April 8.—The first official announcement to the Mexican people that American troops are in Mexico was made by Foreign Minister Aguilar today in a public statement saying: "The Mexican government has not granted permission to the American government to use the railroads."

PRESIDENT TO RETURN TODAY.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—President Wilson has changed his plans and will return from his cruise on Chesapeake Bay this afternoon. It is believed that the preliminary reply to the Sussex note has been received from Germany.

We extend greetings to

MILLS RESTAURANT TO CONTINUE IN SUMMER

The Mills restaurant will continue through the summer under the same management, under which it has been run during the past winter, that of Wegman and Cattaneo.

These gentlemen intend to make their restaurant the neatest and best of the moderate sized cafes on the east coast of the state, and have purchased the adjoining store intending to tear down the partition and enlarge their restaurant in preparation for the business of next winter.

Every day is summer in Daytona.

GREAT COLONIAL

ARMY FOR FRANCE

LONDON, April 8.—A writer in the London World says:

"I understand that France is now employed in raising and training a large colonial army for use on the western front this summer. Up to the present no fewer than 450,000 native troops have been raised by our ally for service in the various campaigns. The majority came from North Africa, and many have already fought in France and Gallipoli. A considerable force, which has been engaged in the Cameroons, is now liberated for service in France. Forty thousand men were obtained from Morocco, while even Indo-China has supplied between forty and fifty thousand men. Most of these have been employed for relief work in the French garrisons, but they have also been used for industrial purposes, notably in making aeroplane frames and munitions generally."

A Girl of Tennessee

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

After the close of the war between the states certain young men of the north—a number of them had served in the Union army—thought that a fine opportunity offered to go south, buy some of the plantations that were to be had for a song and grow up with the country under the new system of free labor.

I was one of these deluded beings. I say deluded, for the south needed fully a decade to right itself after the scourge of war and the change from slave to free labor. However, this has nothing to do with my story. I had been a soldier during the war and had campaigned in the region of Tennessee which takes in the Cumberland plateau. An admirer of mountain scenery, I had fallen in love with this country and aimed when peace came to settle there.

One day I was riding along the base of the mountain, armed with drafts on Louisville with which to buy a small farm, when I overhauled a couple in a buggy, a man about thirty and a girl perhaps twenty. I made some inquiries of the man and judged at once from his want of the dialect of the region that he didn't belong there. The girl was evidently indigenous to the country, not only from her looks, but her manner of speech.

The man told me that he was bent on the same errand as I—he was looking for a farm. I was some time getting on to the relationship between him and the girl, but at last learned that the night before he had stopped at her father's house. In the morning when he continued his journey she said she wished to visit a friend in Chattanooga and insisted on going with him. Since there was a vacant seat in his buggy, he could not well refuse to take her.

For the sake of company I rode directly behind the couple and had ample opportunity to observe them. It soon became evident to me that the girl was not a welcome traveling companion to the man. An unlabeled "poor white" country girl, she could not talk on any subject that would interest him. Besides, something I know not what—indicated that her presence troubled him. He was constantly making excuses for parting company with her, but they all failed to enable him to get rid of her.

Finally when evening came he told her that he was intending to bivouac for the night and she must find a house in which to sleep. She looked at me appealingly and said:

"Stranger, what you goin' to sleep?"
"I don't know. Why do you ask?"
"If you uns and he uns are goin' to sleep in the open region I mought sleep near by."

I saw that this was an invitation in her crude way for me to constitute myself a chaperon, and I could not resist her appeal. I said I would be one of a bivouac party, and we all stopped where there was water, and as each one of us had something eatable for a luncheon we ate our supper and soon after dark found soft spots on which to sleep. I had a blanket, which I offered the girl, but she declined it, wrapping a shawl about her shoulders instead.

Puzzled as to the reason for the desire of the girl to stick to her fellow traveler, I lay awake thinking about it. Presently I heard the man breathing as if asleep. I thought I heard a sound come from where the girl was sleeping, some fifty feet distant. I looked in that direction and saw her silhouette against the sky line. Without the slightest sound she disappeared to the eastward, which was toward the mountain.

What did it all mean? The man had all day been trying to get rid of the girl, and now she had evidently shaken him. I debated in my mind whether I should notify him of her disappearance, but I had come to believe that there was more between them than appeared on the surface, and my sympathies were rather with her than with him. So I lay still and said nothing. After awhile I slumbered.

I am a light sleeper and presently was awakened by a movement of the man who was close beside me. He was getting up stealthily, and I saw in the dim light that he had his hand on a rifle.

"What are you going to do?" I asked. He clapped a hand on my mouth and whispered: "Don't wake that girl. I'm a revenue officer and am going to capture a still a short distance from here up in the mountain. She has suspected me from the night I stopped at her father's house and has stuck to me ever since. I fancy she thinks I'm going to trap some one in whom she has an interest. Keep still while I steal away."

"You're too late, my friend," I said. "The girl lit out some time ago."

As soon as he came to believe what I had told him he went over to where the girl had been lying and confirmed what I had said.

"She's beaten me," he said ruefully. "These country girls are not so stupid as they appear."

"Not where a lover is concerned. Ten to one you were after her best fellow."

"I reckon that's so. When I stopped at her home I was fool enough to ask if any of them knew the man I was after."

I went on to Chattanooga and on my return saw the girl again. She was very grateful to me for the part I had taken in her affair. She had just been married to the man she warned

ALLANDALE

A STRAIGHT FORWARD TALK

Do not deceive yourself with the thought that all real estate developments are alike. Speaking broadly, the man who buys in a hap-hazard sort of way is informed only to a limited degree as to the future of any proposition. His investment is not based on FAITH, but on a gambling chance. Our purpose is to implant the right idea in the mind of the investor as to the future of our proposition. We can only do this by informing you as to a few fundamentals and every SUCCESSFUL real estate development is planned, conducted and CARRIED TO A FINISH along similar lines as ours.

If we had the coin in the bank at the present moment to do all that we intend to do we might be tempted to spend it, although it would not be good policy, because A TOWN'S GROWTH MUST BE CONTINUOUS.

ALLANDALE has been bought and paid for; it is on a sound financial basis. We are alive to the splendid future that lies ahead of us and we want every home-builder who joins with us in the development of this property to share our prosperity.

WE HAVE THE FINEST LOCATION on the Halifax River for a town; the country back of us for miles is higher than the ridge along the river; we have planned for ideal drainage and sewerage; we have planned roads that will open up the back country—a good, all year round town MUST have a well developed country back of it. We have kept MODERN IMPROVEMENTS in view from the first and we did what we could to encourage the building of classy homes.

We have laid out another section to be known as HARBOR POINT where only residences will be allowed and with reasonable restrictions, and it will be the most exclusive residential section in the environs of Daytona.

We have our Main Idea always uppermost—TO ATTRACT PERSONS WHO ARE LOOKING FOR AN IDEAL PLACE OF RESIDENCE. These are fundamentals that insure the future success of

"SUNNY ALLANDALE"

"THE TYPHOON" SHOWN AT CRESCENT MONDAY

"The Typhoon" depicts the unusual story of the love and tragedy of a young Japanese and Helene, a Parisian actress, interwoven with the intrigues of the Japanese government, its spy and its methods of procedure. The crowning climax is a heroic sacrifice of Hironari showing the loyalty of the Japanese race to their country, even to the giving of life itself.

Tokoromo has been sent to Paris by his country to secure the plans of the French military forces. His work is interfered with by the visits to his office of Helene, a chorus girl with whom he has fallen in love. Helene has heartlessly thrown over her fiancé Bernisky for the new and interesting Jap, and meanwhile Tokoromo's countrymen in Paris have been informed by their spy of Helene's visits.

Tokoromo endeavors to keep Helene from coming, because he is working day and night; but to no avail. She continues to visit his apartments against his wishes, and one day while there her rejected sweetheart forces his way past the servant into Tokoromo's room. Tokoromo quickly hides Helene behind a curtain, where she listens to her own denunciation and exposure from the lips of the man she has so lightly deserted. When Bernisky departs, Tokoromo brings Helene from her hiding place and bids her go forever, but she pleads passionately to remain. Tokoromo will not listen and demands that she leave at once. Helene starts, and Tokoromo, realizing how much he cares for her, calls her back. Then she refuses to stay, and in vehement denunciation tells him she will go back to Bernisky and laughs at him—calls him a "yellow rat" and bids him return to his yellow country from whence he came. This enrages Tokoromo, and he strangles Helene to death and leaves her lying on his bed.

The remainder of the story shows graphically how Tokoromo's countrymen rally for their country. Tokoromo must do his work—one of them must plead guilty. This lot is chosen by Hironari, a mere boy, who is finally guillotined. In the end and as Tokoromo has completed his work, he too dies, and the valuable papers are burned to escape detection just as the police are breaking into the apartment. The scene shows the vain sacrifice that has been made by the Japanese for the "sake of Nippon."

This interesting Paramount feature will be the attraction at the Crescent theatre Monday, April 10.

Mercury Aids Plants.

A scientific investigator of Europe has discovered a new method of destroying fungus disease and household pests by the use of mercury. In enclosed spaces the mercury is employed in the form of vapor. In other cases it is injected in metallic form directly into the circulating fluids of the plant. The growths of the plant is not in any way disturbed, but it is most cases actually assisted.

 —Selected.

Celebrating the hundredth anniversary of its founding, the American Bible society has announced that during its existence it has distributed a total of 109,926,214 volumes of Scripture in this and many foreign lands. The society was organized for the purpose of keeping the price of a Bible within reach of the poor to secure as wide distribution as possible. Similar societies have been organized in many of the nations of Europe.

Portions of the Scriptures have been printed in about 500 different dialects and languages. The entire Bible has been printed in a hundred different translations. It has been sent to every nook and corner of the world, and the work is growing each year.

A people which has not the Bible in its own language cannot have Sunday schools for Bible study. On the other hand, any community which reads the Bible is sure to have a Bible Sunday school. Every separate version of the Scriptures becomes thus a door of opportunity to the Sunday school enterprise, for it is a breach in the walls of Babel.

Thousands of Sunday schools in the United States, in Asia, in Africa and in the islands of the great, silent ocean owe their existence and their prosperity to the fact that the Bible has been translated into their native language.

The Bible societies of the world are counted by thousands, but as far as can be learned the most of these societies, as well as the home and foreign missionary societies of all Christendom, obtain the Scriptures, which are the essential implement of their work, from less than thirty Bible societies in Europe and America which print the Scriptures.

In 1914 the whole number of volumes issued by those societies which print was probably over 28,000,000. Of this number it is estimated that fully 27,000,000 were put into circulation.

Over five-sixths of this number—that is to say, 19,320,969 volumes—are issued by three English speaking societies—the British and Foreign Bible society (10,162,000), the American Bible society (6,396,323) and the Scottish National Bible society (2,762,616). The issues of these three societies include nearly the whole of the Scriptures used by the missions and Sunday schools in Asia, Africa and the islands of the Pacific ocean besides a great part of those distributed by the Sunday school unions in Christian lands.

The Bible societies often co-operate in dividing the expense of new translations of the Bible. They supply each other at cost with Scriptures in foreign languages when required.

On the Survey

By M. QUAD

I was second mate of the British steamer Forward during her two years of exploration in the mouth of the Amazon, and no other field could have been selected to furnish more daily adventure.

The Forward carried two six-pound cannon as her armament, and when loaded drew only five feet of water. We were conveyed from Georgetown, in British Guiana, by a man-of-war and a brig, the latter to anchor where our captain directed and remain as a store ship and a haven for us in case of disaster.

We had a steam launch and two yawls for exploration where the steamer could not go, and there were six of us out in the launch one day making soundings in a great bend, when a monster crocodile rose to the surface close beside us, lunged forward and had his head and one leg over the gunwale before any one saw him. The engineer had a hatchet within reach, and with this he gave the reptile such a blow as made him draw off and sink out of sight. The launch had scarcely righted herself, however, when a full dozen more of the saurians rose to the attack. We should have been capsized and every man devoured alive had we been in one of the yawls. As it was, we drove ahead full speed and outran them, though some of them pursued us for half a mile, and we were nearly swamped with the water splashed into the boat. A few days later, one afternoon as the steamer came to anchor in a channel, the anchor must have dropped among a bed of sleeping crocodiles. They rose all about us, hissing and splashing, and this excitement brought up others until sixty-six enormous big fellows were to be counted at one time. They attacked the steamer with the utmost fury, and while their efforts were harmless their struggles rocked her as if she was at sea in a gale.

On another occasion one of these monsters did us a good turn. I had charge of one of the yawls which was sounding a channel. The men at the oars were pulling slowly against the current, while the one handling the lead was casting and calling out when zip! came a dart, from the sound it made. Either shore was too far off for a dart to reach us. Over our starboard bow as we pulled ahead was a long tongue of land reaching out from the right hand shore and ending in a pile of driftwood. The tongue had been created by drifting trees grounding on the bottom and the silt collecting to make a bar. I stood up in the boat and took a long look, but could see nothing. I ought to have been able to detect even a rabbit anywhere on that tongue or drift, as there were no bushes, but nothing whatever was in sight. I was in the act of sitting down, almost satisfied that we had all been deceived when a second arrow whisked so close to my cheek that I thought a bird had darted for my eye.

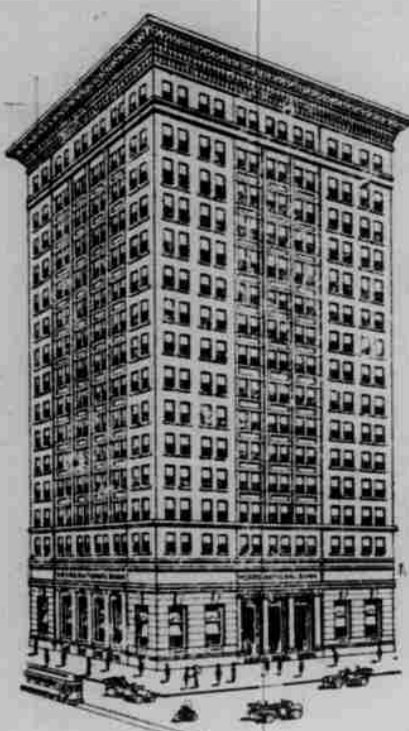

"A close call, sir, and it was a poisoned dart at that," said one of the men as I dropped back to my seat. "The infernal wretch must be in that driftwood, though I can't see him," added the man with the lead line.

We held the boat stationary and prepared to signal to the steamer, which was a mile below, when all of a sudden a fifteen foot crocodile landed on the tongue of land and began crawling toward the driftwood. He had just reached the pile when a native who had been skillfully concealed rose up with a cry of despair. He had a reed or blowgun in his hands, and he made frantic motions to us to save him. We were consulting what to do when the crocodile made a rush, drove him off the pile and followed after to catch him in the water. As we saw nothing of the man after that, we felt positive of his horrible fate, though we had no sympathy to waste.

The jaguar of the Amazon is also called a cougar, a puma and a panther, and he seems to be one and the same beast, no matter what the name. He is lithe, fierce and vigilant and an enemy to be dreaded by even the best armed man. We often saw pumas on the shore or crouched in trees and now and then floating past us on drifting logs, and their far reaching cries were always to be heard at night if we lay within a mile of the jungle. The only man of us killed in the two years met his fate at the hands of a jaguar and under singular circumstances. We had landed on the right hand shore and then paid out our rope cable by which we were fast to a tree to be safe from a cave-in during the night. The anchor watch for the night consisted of only one man, relieved at intervals of four hours.

The man who went on at midnight had been on duty only half an hour when a cave-in took place. A strip of the bank, which was four feet above water when we turned in dropped to the river, and with it the tree to which we were fast. The tree fell directly over the bows of the boat, but only its top coming aboard, and that without doing any great damage. We heard the man's shouts of alarm, but before any one had turned out it was all over with him. A jaguar had been hidden in the treetop, and as the tree fell it came aboard with it and at once sprang upon the watchman. He had the man by the throat and was sucking his blood as we turned out and finished him.

Many similar adventures filled our days before we finished our explorations on the Amazon.

Navigation through the Panama caanal is not likely again to be seriously interrupted by slides, and realization the great purpose for which the waterway was constructed is assured in the near future, according to the finding of the committee of scientists appointed by the National Academy of Sciences at the request of President Wilson to investigate the problem.

A summary of a preliminary report by the committee was made public at the White House. Excessive rainfall was found to be one of the chief causes for the slides, and control of the falling water was the most important remedy suggested. The committee made detailed recommendations for the prevention of slides in future.

"The committee looks to the future of the canal with confidence," the report declares. "It is not unkindful of the labor necessary to deal with the present slides, and it realizes that slides may be a considerable but not an unreasonably large maintenance charge upon the canal for a number of years. It also realizes that trouble in the Culebra district may possibly again close the canal. Nevertheless the committee firmly believes that after the present difficulties have been overcome navigation through the canal is not likely again to be seriously interrupted. There is absolutely no justification for the statement that traffic will be repeatedly interrupted during long periods for years to come. The canal will serve the great purpose for which it was constructed, and the realization of that purpose in the near future is assured.

Precautions Urged by Scientists.

"The committee believes that some sliding ground will continue to enter the canal for several years to come, though in diminishing amounts. Any relatively inexpensive measures which tend to arrest the present active slides or which promise to reduce the charge against maintenance of the canal in the future are therefore fully warranted."

The committee believes that every available and practicable device should be used to turn rain from ground that is sliding and prevent its entering adjacent ground, and it suggests the following measures:

"The committee believes that threatening ground bordering the slides, quiescent slides and, so far as practicable, active slides themselves, should be sufficiently covered with vegetation to prevent surface wash.

"Before extensive movements of the ground occur warning is frequently given by the appearance of cracks peripheral to the coming slide. As soon as they are formed they should be filled up in order that they may not intercept surface water.

"Undisturbed and threatened areas near the slides should be thoroughly drained both by surface and by tile drainage, to keep as much water out of them as possible, for they may be come unstable, and they may supply water to the slides.

"A complete system of open drains should be established on the great slides and the water carried away as directly as possible.

"Drainage by means of tunnels might be adapted to a few special cases, but should be tried with caution and extended only in cases which promise results commensurate with the cost."

In summing up the history of the present slides the committee concludes that since the three great slides are all in the Culebra district this is the chief area of danger. This is the natural consequence of the fact that by far the deepest part of the canal cut is in this district, and that the weakest of the geological formations, the Cucu-racha, is strongly developed here.

This Invention

ADDS 80 PER CENT TO EFFICIENCY

ADDS YEARS TO ENDURANCE

AND GETS 76 HORSE POWER FROM

Hudson Super-Six

Patented by Hudson

December 28, 1915

Patent No. 1165861

A MARVELOUS MOTOR, WHICH NO TASK WILL TAX

THESE ARE THE GREATEST FACTS WHICH WERE EVER ANNOUNCED ABOUT A MOTOR CAR.

ALL of them have been amply proved. All are being proved anew, a thousand times a day. And all of them can be proved to you by one ride in the SUPER-SIX.

If you doubt any of these claims, go prove them. If rivals sneer at them, go learn the facts.

The Hudson Company never made a false claim. Its engineering corps has long been the ablest in the field. Its chief engineer, Howard E. Coffin, has held top place for years. It is now the largest maker of quality cars in the world. So you should assume that the SUPER-SIX will justify our claims.

NO OTHER CAR CAN GET IT

The SUPER-SIX is a Hudson invention, controlled by Hudson patents. No other car can get it. Rivals must combat it in any way they can.

But the SUPER-SIX has been subjected to many official tests. It has done what no other stock car ever did. And Hudson dealers—everywhere, everyday—are making records which were never matched.

Thousands of these cars are now running. Day by day they are placing the SUPER-SIX supremacy beyond possible dispute. If you buy a fine car before knowing these facts you are sure to face years of regret.

34 HORSEPOWER ADDED

THE SUPER-SIX, IN MOST RESPECTS, IS A CONVENTIONAL LIGHT SIX MOTOR. IT INVOLVES NO EXPERIMENT.

BUT WE ADD A NEW PRINCIPLE — A HUDSON INVENTION. ITS BASIC NECESSITY IS ATTESTED BY A U. S. PATENT.

BEFORE THIS INVENTION, A MOTOR OF THIS SIZE DELIVERED AT MAXIMUM 42 HORSEPOWER. IN THE SUPER-SIX IT DELIVERS 76 HORSEPOWER — AN INCREASE OF 80 PER CENT.

ALL THIS EXTRA RESERVE POWER IS GAINED IN THIS MOTOR WITHOUT ADDING SIZE OR CYLINDERS. IT IS STILL A LIGHT SIMPLE, ECONOMICAL SIX. BUT NO LIKE-SIZE MOTOR EVER BUILT HAS YIELDED SO MUCH POWER.

WE HAVE DEALERS EVERYWHERE. THESE ARE IN YOUR VICINITY:

"GET A DEMONSTRATION"

DAYTONA AUTO SUPPLY CO.

NEXT TO POST OFFICE

DAYTONA, FLORIDA

All Other Cars Outrivalled

At Sheepshead Bay, under A.A.A. supervision, a 7 passenger Super-Six stock car excelled all former stock cars in these tests.

100 miles in 80 min., 21.4 sec., averaging 74.67 miles per hour, with driver and passenger.

75.69 miles in one hour with driver and passenger. Standing start to 50 miles an hour in 16.2 seconds.

During these tests the car was driven 1350 miles at top capacity, at speed exceeding 70 miles per hour, without discoverable wear on any part.

DECIDE IT NOW

Let the nearest Hudson dealer prove these facts to you. Watch the Super-Six perform. Note how enormously it excels other cars. Find out the facts before you buy a car that lacks these features.

If you want the supreme car and want it soon, the time to decide is now.

The Super-Six is twice out-selling any previous Hudson car. We are working three shifts 24 hours a day, in an effort to meet the demand. But every car that goes out sells others. And we cannot long offer spring delivery.

We have no need to urge sales. Men who see the Super-Six perform will over-buy our output.

But we do want admirers of fine cars to know the Super-Six. And we wish to avoid any misconceptions which may lead you to years of regret.

The republic of Haiti occupies about one-third of the island of Haiti. It is one of the richest islands in the Caribbean world. That part which composes the republic of Haiti is a land of mountains and valleys, a little larger than the state of Massachusetts. It presents an astounding variety of climate and vegetation, varying all the way from tropical jungle near the coast to high mountain ridges covered with forest not unlike that of Maine and Canada.

Sacred White Elephant.

A white elephant is regarded sacred in Siam, and when one dies it has a funeral grander than that accorded to princes. Buddhist priests officiate and thousands of devout Siamese men and women follow the deceased animal to the grave. Jewels and offerings representing much wealth are buried with the elephant.

FLED FRANCE IN PLANE, HE SAYS

American Tells a Marvelous Tale of Adventures at Front.

FEARED THE FIRING SQUAD.

Arrested After Attempting to Send Dispatches by the Censor, He Broke Out of Jail, Walked Many Miles and Met an American Aviator, Who Took Him Safely to England.

Thomas A. Price, a news writer, of Audubon, N. J., came back from the European battlefields the other day with a story of strange and divers adventures. The narrative as Price told it—his flight from court martial and death in France, crossing the English channel in an aeroplane and returning to New York as a stowaway aboard the American liner Philadelphia—follows:

"I went over last May as a free lance. But I soon found that I could not see anything more than the authorities wanted me to see, and I couldn't send that out unless they were willing. So I went to Kent and enlisted as a Canadian. I was sent to France about the 1st of July to a station at Kemmel, between Ypres and Messines, with the second divisional ammunition corps. I was made a dispatch rider, and I went all through the French and Belgian lines, under shell fire most of the time.

"I shot the battle of Loos and got sent to the base hospital at Etaples as a result of being buried in a shell crater.

All His News Censored.

"All the time I was trying to get something out, but I found that everything I wrote was slashed. At last I found a man going to England on leave, and he agreed to take some of my stuff. I don't know whether they trapped him or whether he turned back on me, but I was arrested and held for court martial. The rules are severe in such things, and death is usually the punishment.

"I was put in prison at Westoutre, Belgium, in an old building that had been hit by shell fire. It looked easy to escape, and as I saw nothing ahead but the firing squad I made the attempt. When the sentry was lounging in a corner out of sight I slipped away. I could only travel by night, for I was hemmed in on all sides. At Ploegstreet, near the Belgian-French border, I got caught in the middle of a body of troops accidentally, and I had to hide in a haystack for four days without food or water before they moved on. I weighed 170 pounds when I started, and I'm down to 120 now. The whole trip was practically a continuous fast.

Saved by American Aviator.

"At last I got to an aviation hangar at Ballieul, about eight miles across the French border. I hid near by, living on raw turnips from the fields and creeping in when no one was around to gather up the leavings from the soldiers' mess.

"At last one day I heard an American talking. I was hiding behind a hedge fence, and I managed to get him alone. I told him the whole yarn, and I begged him to get my memorandum book home to my folks. But the American—I don't dare to give his name—did more. He was starting with some dispatches across the channel, and he put me on his machine, goggled and disguised as his helper. We were thirty-five miles from the channel, the distance across was twenty miles, and he dropped me near Hendon, where he was going, sixty miles inland, a distance of 115 miles in all. Then he gave me a pound note and left me. I made for my old quarters at London and got some clothes and enough money to take me to Liverpool.

"I sneaked aboard and hid in the sand lockers. I expected to be caught even then, for, although I had my American passport, I wouldn't have dared to show it, for it would have revealed me as Price, a deserter. But I found that I could walk among the steerage passengers without anybody suspecting that I was not one of them. When the ship docked I just walked ashore as one of the crew, and somehow or other I got by with it."

WHISKYTOWN CHANGES NAME.

Now Called Schilling After Man Who Refused to Serve as Postmaster.

Schilling is to be the postoffice name of the town of Whiskytown, Cal., between Shasta and French Gulch, on the Redding-Weaverville stage route. The name Schilling has been decided upon by the postoffice department.

Stella is the old postoffice name of Whiskytown. The office was abandoned six years ago when the late John F. Schilling, who had been postmaster for several years, positively refused to serve longer if the department insisted on putting money orders in the office. Schilling held out, and the office was abandoned. It has since been re-established.

Miss Jinks, Domestopath

By F. A. MITCHEL

One spring morning while touring in my car I passed a little house standing a short distance back from the road to which was nailed a sign, "Miss Jinks, Domestopath."

Now, I had often heard of the allopath, hydropath, osteopath and other schools, but never before had I seen the word domestopath. I drove on, wondering what it meant, my curiosity rising with every mile I receded from it till I could stand it no longer. Then I turned, rode back to the house, left my car in the road and went up to the door. There was no bell, but an old fashioned iron knocker, representing the face of a smiling girl. I rapped.

A lady came to the door who was in appearance as unintelligible as the sign. She might have been fifty, yet she was dressed like a girl of sixteen. While her face and figure smacked of youth, it at the same time smacked of age. I asked if she was Dr. Jinks. She said she was Miss Jinks and invited me into a cozy consulting room.

"What is your specialty?" I asked her.

"Squabbles," she said in a cracked voice as peculiar as her appearance.

"Squabbles? I never heard of that disease."

"It's universal. Every one suffers from it more or less."

"What are the symptoms?"

"It comes largely from overstrained nerves. Sometimes it is reasonable, though usually unreasonable. It is most common between husband and wife, for the reason that a man is a man, while a woman is half child."

"What! You, a woman, make that statement?"

"A man living with a woman," she went on, "is continually in the presence of a being made up entirely different from himself, and vice versa. Therefore they are subject at all times to the disease of which I make a specialty—squabbles."

"Oh, I see! Well, I don't know that my wife and I have any more of that disease than the average couple. At the same time—"

The last four words were enough for Miss Jinks. She told me of difficulties I had with my wife with as much exactness as if she had been a member of my family. They were not serious, but annoying, and sometimes bordered on what might be called quarrelsomeness.

"And you eradicate these difficulties, these squabbles, as you call them?"

"Wherever I can get my patients to take my medicine."

"What is your treatment?"

"That is my secret. If you desire me to treat you and your wife I shall charge you a fee to begin with—"

"You would need to call upon my wife," I interrupted, "and I don't see what reason could be offered for doing so."

"Not at all. Your wife will call on me."

"How do you make out that?"

"Give me your address and I will send her my card."

"How would that effect the purpose?"

"What led you to make this visit?"

"Curiosity."

"Will you deny that your wife has less curiosity than you?"

"On the contrary, she has ten times as much as I."

"She need not know you have been here. As I was about to say when you interrupted me, I shall charge you a consulting fee of $5 and will charge your wife a fee of $10."

"Why charge my wife more than me?"

"People only value what costs them something. A woman is always bound to get the full value of her money. If your wife pays a good sum for my advice she will be more apt to follow it. The man is more liable to act upon the value of what he receives as he sees it."

"You surely know your sex."

"We women all know one another."

Before I left Miss Jinks I handed her a five dollar bill and gave her my home address, asking her for the medicine. But she said a prescription would be sent in due time. Squabbles was a plural disease; no one could have it without inoculating some one else. The cure must therefore be plural. I saw the point and submitted to be guided by Miss Jinks' method. I left her trusting that her efforts to cure my wife would be successful. Since all our difficulties were her fault, the treatment would naturally pertain to her. Miss Jinks did not gainsay this; she only smiled a wizen smile.

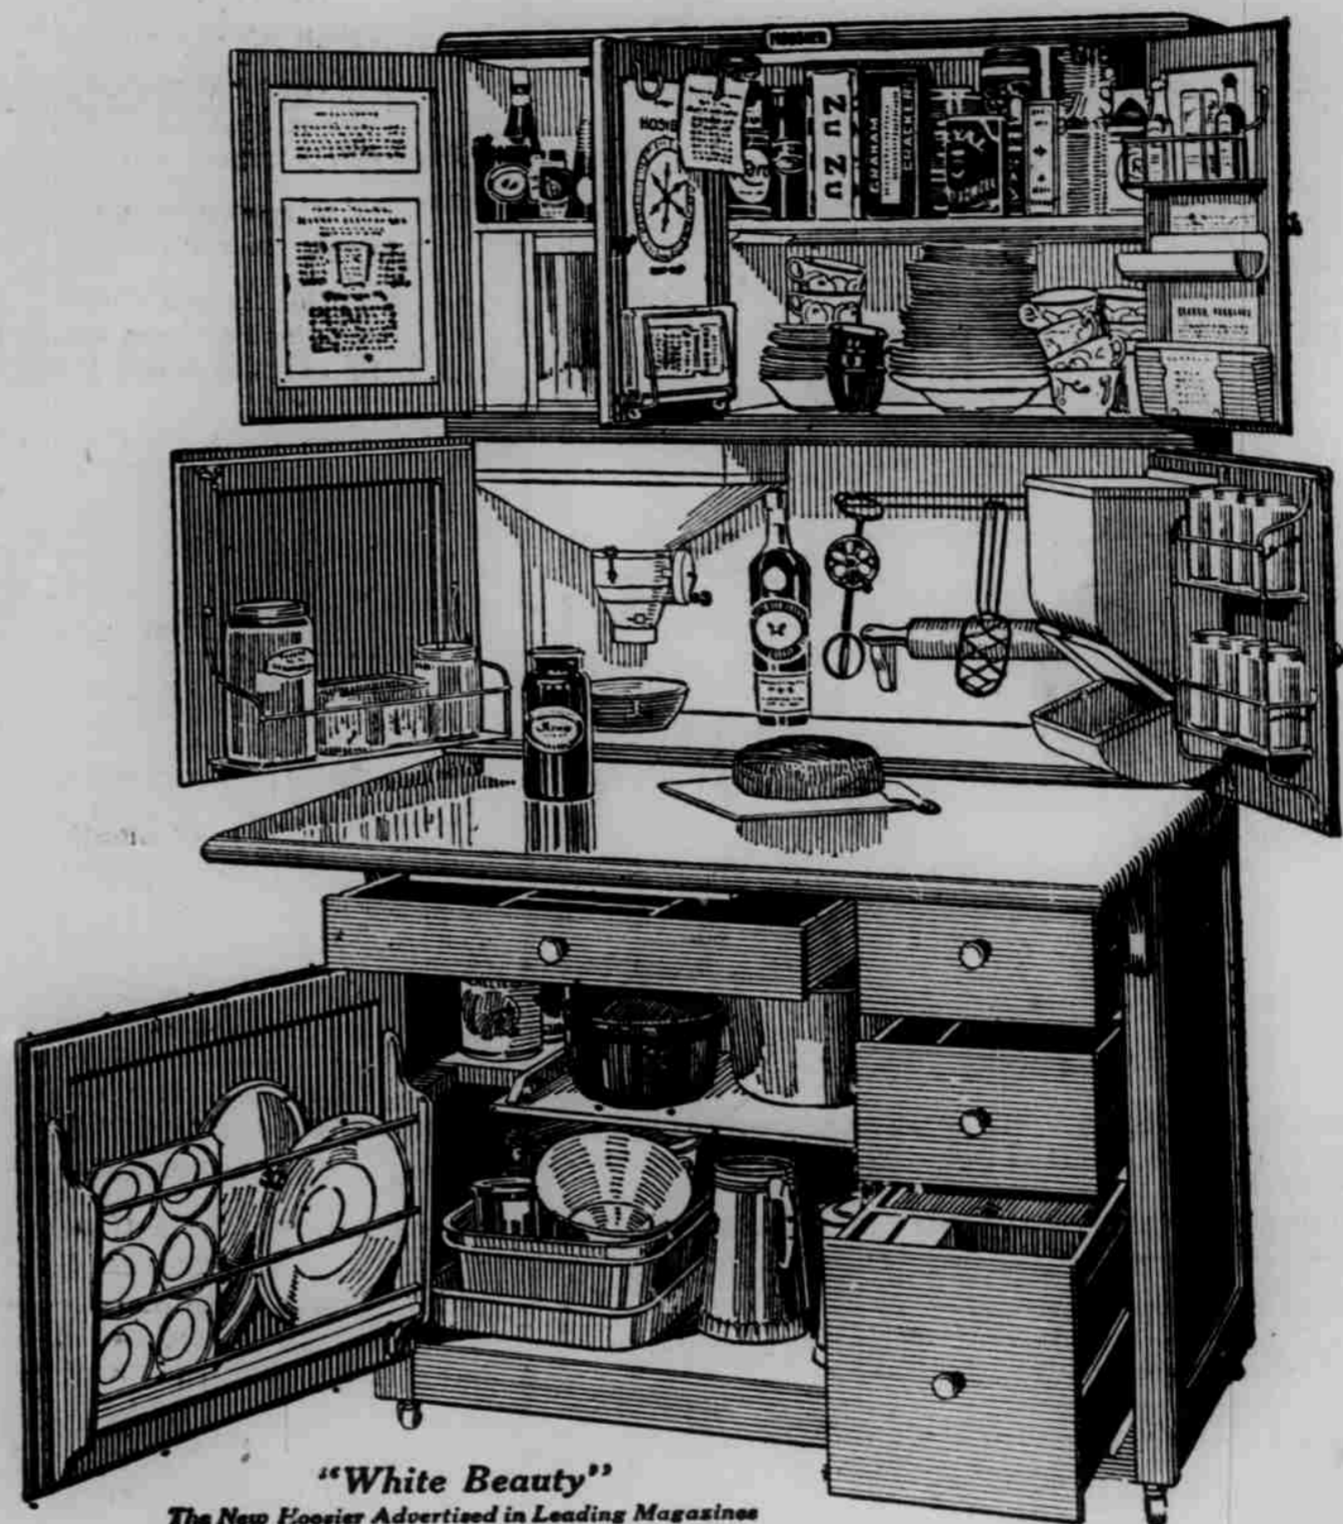

A few days after this my wife informed me that she was going to make a tour in the car and would be gone all day. Since it was a day's ride to and from the domestopath's I assumed that she was going there. She returned without saying where she had been, but I noticed that when I found fault with her for concealing her doings she refrained from answering back.

The next morning I received by mail a prescription from Miss Jinks: "Look for the fault within yourself."

To make a long story short, Miss Jinks had given me and my wife the same prescription. It struck us on consideration that the prescription was worth what we paid for it, and I observed the treatment on this account. Julia observed it because she didn't propose "to pay out $10 for nothing."

We have kept up Miss Jinks' treatment from that day to this, and no household is happier.

Hanging for Stealing Sheep.

Until 1827 stealing a sheep was a capital crime in Great Britain. An act of that year removed the distinction between grand and petit larceny; before that year the theft of goods above the value of 12 pence, in the house of the owner though not from his person, was a capital crime. In 1800 over 200 and in 1819 about 180 crimes were punishable by the death penalty.

QUIETLY MARRIED IN FIRST M. E. CHURCH PARSONAGE

Miss Louise B. Brooks, of Providence, R. I., and Roy W. Devlin, of this city, were united in marriage Friday evening at 8:00 o'clock in the parsonage of the First M. E. church on North Palmetto avenue, Rev. H. W. Hodge, pastor of the church, performing the ceremony in the presence of George Ferguson and Miss Jennie Smith, who were the only witnesses.

The bride has been here through the winter season and the groom, who was originally from Portsmouth, Ark., has been a resident of Daytona and a valued employee of the Gruber-Morris Hardware company for about three years. Mr. and Mrs. Devlin, who are at home in the Loomis apartments on Loomis avenue, will have the good wishes of numerous friends for their future happiness and prosperity.

DID HE KIDNAP
HER?

By M. QUAD
 Copyright, 1916, by the McClure
 Newspaper Syndicate.

"Gosh hang it, but I believe I am an idiot! I not only believe it, but I know I am. Here am I most thirty years old and still am a bachelor instead of having a wife."

It was Giles Stebbins, seated in his farmhouse three miles from the town of Dawson. Outside it was raining heavily.

"No dog, no cat, no wife," he muttered as he looked into the fire and then gave the wood a vicious kick. "I ought to have been married years ago. I ought to have a wife to do the cooking and make the bed and sweep up this litter on the floors, but I have been a fool and had to pay for it. I am too homely to go a-courting like other men, but I ought to have taken desperate chances."

It was true about Giles Stebbins being a homely man. Nature had not been kind to him. He was long, lank and lathy.

"Yes," continued Giles as he reached for his old clay pipe and filled the bowl of it with the dried leaves of a hazel bush as a substitute for tobacco; "I am going to bring a wife here. Then will follow a cat, perhaps a canary, then some decent meals and a happy home."

At about the same hour, in the village of Dawson, Mary Parker, old maid and twenty-nine years old, sat talking with her mother.

"Mary," said the mother, "I don't want to hurt your feelings, but both your father and me are bitterly disappointed in you. I say it is almost scandalous, with you being such a good housekeeper as you are."

"You may call it scandalous or anything else, mother, but I have no chance with the other girls, and you know that as well as I do. I can cook, mend and wash, but I am so dreadfully homely."

"But there is Giles Stebbins," said the mother after a brief silence.

"Why, he is more homely than I am," ruefully laughed Mary. "I shall wait a hundred years if necessary for some other man to come along."

"They say he is getting well off."

"And it may be true, but that is no compensation for his looks. He always reminds me of a scarecrow hung on a pole."

With that Mary went to her room, and after fussing around for a moment she sat down and took a long look at herself in the glass. By and by she said to herself:

"Yes, that is my homely face, and it will be homelier as I grow older. I ought to have found a husband long ago, homely as I am, but none came along. I'll put myself in the way of being kidnaped. At least if some man tried to kidnap me I wouldn't shriek and cry for help. I'll take a little walk through the streets tomorrow evening and see if something won't occur. With a new hat on and a veil hiding my face I think I can pass muster."

On the evening of the next day after his frugal repast Giles Stebbins hitched the old white mare to the top buggy and then donned his Sunday suit and started for the village of Dawson.

"Yes, I am going to be a kidnaper and a husband," said Giles to himself as he rode along. "I shan't stop to introduce myself or explain anything."

It was nearly 9 o'clock when he drove into the village. Its citizens kept early hours. Most of them were in bed or preparing for it when the old white mare and her driver appeared. Miss Mary Parker had strolled out as per her program. She had taken a walk of half a mile and had just turned to retrace her steps, somewhat disappointed, but still hopeful, when a vehicle dashed up beside her and a man leaped from it. It was Giles Stebbins, of course, but she did not recognize him.

"You are going with me!" he exclaimed in a low, tense voice. "If you resist the consequences may be awful!"

"Don't you call for help," warned Giles as they dashed through town.

"If you are a married woman tell me so and I will take you back. If you are single I am going to take you to Deacon Carter's house to marry you. I am not a villain, but I have lived alone long enough. What do you say?"

Giles thought she snuggled up to him a little for answer, and he was satisfied that he was not running away with some good man's wife.

"Now to get spliced," said Giles as he descended from the vehicle and reached up his arms to aid his victim to follow. She had no objections to offer, as he expected. He took her arm and escorted her to the deacon's store and had the good fortune to find the justice winding the clock preparatory to retiring to his bed.

"We want to get married," was the kidnaper's salutation.

"It won't take over three minutes, and the fee will be $2," was the reply.

Now came the crisis. Mary Parker had to raise her veil, and at the same time she slipped a ring off her finger and handed it to Giles to be used at the proper moment. She looked him full in the face, as he did her, and there was mutual recognition.

DEATH PENALTY FOR DESERTION OF MILITARY POST IN TIME OF WAR

PARIS, April 8.—If in the country near the rear of the French battle line you see an unmarked soldier's grave, with no cross, or wreath above it, most likely it is the last resting place of an executed man.

Discipline is strict in war time. Each French division has a regular permanent court martial attached to it, which collects evidence of military crimes, tries offenders and carries out sentences.

One of the officers of such a court martial was induced to talk about his somber duties. He said:

"You must remember that armies today are made up of millions of men, men of all shades and colors of political sentiments and religious creeds—Anarchists and Socialists, Republicans and Royalists, Atheists and Ultramontanes, Jews and Mohammedans. Out of this material we have welded together an army the like of which the world has never seen. And this applies equally to our Allies, and no less to our enemies.

"In these armies absolute obedience is demanded of every man, and a high plane of intelligent efficiency is required of the individual in order that he may maintain the standard of discipline of modern armies. Yet when I tell you that during the eighteen months of war I have been continuously occupied in my present functions with my division, and we have brought before the court-martial only 315 men, of whom 15 have been executed and 9, who received capital sentences, pardoned, you can see for yourself the astonishingly fine discipline of our armies.

"You should perhaps be surprised, but most of our cases are due to thoughtlessness on the part of the 'poulu.' Every soldier knows that to abandon his post in the face of the enemy, no matter how brief a moment, is punishable by death, and some times the best of men have been shot for this seemingly small breach of discipline, which, nevertheless, is the most heinous crime in the whole military code.

"I well recall our first court-martial of a case of this kind. We were new to the business ourselves, but it was a flagrant breach, and to check its repetition it had to be dealt with according to the code of war. The man was duly tried and sentenced. I went to his lock-up and read the death sentence to him. He listened without seeming to understand what had taken place and that he was condemned to die.

"That night I instructed an officer to call for a firing squad. Our firing squads are always composed of volunteers—twelve men. Not a man volunteered for the task. We had to commandeer a squad.

"The prisoner was marched out at dawn, stood quietly facing the leveled rifles, and died without faltering. I am sure he never realized the gravity of his offense. But war is war. Now it is different. The men know the value of discipline, know that a breach of discipline will endanger the lives of their comrades or even the safety of France and though breaches of this kind still occur, they are met in a different spirit. Now if I call for a firing squad fifty men at once volunteer to do the work. Fortunately the occasions are rare.

"Is the family notified that a man has been executed?" the interviewer asked.

"Yes and no," the officer replied. "The French code is peculiar. Notification of death is sent to the family soon after the execution as though the man had died in action. Then three months later the family receives a notice from the local military authorities demanding the payment of the sum of twelve francs fifty-five centimes—the expenses of the execution. But otherwise there is no publicity. The grave is not marked officially, but a record is kept, so that it will not be difficult to locate it later on.

"Breaches of discipline towards superior officers are unknown chiefly because we form one big family at the front. The men are so well looked after by their officers that they are as a rule beloved by them. 'Mon lieutenant,' 'mon capitaine,' are not hollow phrases, but express vividly the true relations between the men and their superiors.

"In every regiment there are one or two to whom military service is congenial. Some are nervous, others cowards, others what you might call 'conscientious objectors,' but France takes no notice of the whims or beliefs of the individual, and when the life of the nation is at stake every able-bodied man, be he priest or puritan, must go into the ranks with the rest.

"These men who are sick of the trenches spend their time devising means to get away. The easiest way to get an honorable discharge, they seem to think, is to wound themselves—shoot off their trigger finger and the like. This is a capital offense in time of war.

"But the case I refer to is that of a young lieutenant who was married three days before the outbreak of the war. He was a gallant young soldier, a fearless officer. But after a few weeks he became homesick, lovesick, or what you will. To get back to his wife was his one desire. Months passed and he could not get leave, so he took matters in his own hands and drove a bullet through his left forearm. He did not stop to think that it would soon be discovered that his wound had been caused by a French bullet.

"He was court-martialed and sentenced to be executed. I read the death sentence, and a few hours later a pardon reached us, but the lieutenant knew his duty and fell fighting in the field without ever seeing his wife again.

"One must love no one but one's country in time of war."

Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Eckler, who have been, as usual, in their winter home on South Palmetto avenue, for the season, leave tomorrow on their return north, accompanied by their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Norman S. Mason and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Mason, who came to Daytona two or three weeks ago from St. Petersburg and have been with Mr. and Mrs. Eckler. The Masons return to Coopers-town, N. Y., but Mr. and Mrs. Eckler, who have resided in that place for a number of years, will go to Oneonta, N. Y., where they have just had a residence built for them and will hereafter make their home.

An Apology.
"Your customs are reprehensible beyond the possibility of expression. The idea of killing your fellow-man for dinner." "Yes," replied the cannibal who had been reading about civilized warfare. "But at least we have the excuse of being hungry."

The "Barefoot" Tire—and Why.

CONSIDER now the means by which many Tires have been given maximum Traction,—i.e., by means of a "sandpaper" texture in the Rubber of their Anti-Skid Treads.

Every time the Brakes are put on, to make such Tires grip the road, the relatively hard, unyielding, and comparatively brittle, texture of the Rubber in their Treads causes these Treads to grind away on the pavement, to WEAR OUT fast at the point of contact.

The sudden efficiency of their grinding-Traction also tugs so sharply on the Rubber Adhesive between the layers of Fabric in Tire as to separate these layers.

There is little "give" to them—just as there is little "slide" to them.

So, they gain Traction at the expense of Mileage. Naturally such Tires require a great BULK of such Rubber in order to deliver reasonable Mileage before worn out.

And, therein they differ radically from GOODRICH "Barefoot" Tires.

Because,—the Safety-Tread on Goodrich Tires is made of "Barefoot-Rubber," a new, and exclusive compound which discards unnecessary whitish "frictional" ingredients that are heaviest and inert, as proved by their lighter weight.

HERE is how it acts in Automobiling.—When the weight of the Car bears on this clinging "Barefoot-Rubber" Tread, and the power is applied to go ahead or reverse, the wonderful stretch in the "Barefoot" Rubber Sole (or Tread) of the Goodrich Tire acts as a sort of Lubricant between the Fabric Structure of the Tire and the Road.

Then, the Barefoot-Rubber "Toes," of the Goodrich Safety-Tread Tire, CLING to the pavement (instead of grinding against it), in such manner as your Bare Foot would cling to a slippery surface—without Grind, and so, with the minimum of Frictional Heat or Wear for maximum Traction.

Goodrich "Barefoot Rubber" is now made into Goodrich FABRIC Tires,—Goodrich Silvertown Cord Tires,—Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Motor Cycle, and Bicycle, Tires, as well as into Goodrich Rubber Boots, Over-Shoes, Soles and Heels.

Get a Sliver of it from your nearest Goodrich Branch, or Dealer. Stretch it thousands of times, but break it you can't.

That's the Stuff that GOODRICH Black-Tread Tires are made of.

GUN TOTING DAYS AGAIN ON BORDER

People Are Tense, Alert, Expectant, but Not Aflame.

NEWS SPREAD BY COURIERS

Everybody Ready For Any Emergency. Even the Railroad Brakemen Are Armed—Funston Denies That Censorship Is Imposed to Test Sentiment For the Future.

The Rio Grande and the west Texas border district is tense, expectant, armed and alert, but to say that it is aflame over the Mexican situation is to exaggerate, writes one correspondent there. He sees Americans and Mexicans standing peacefully together on the station platforms. The Mexicans hold aloof and are silent, but appear neither terrified nor menacing. The Americans seize the papers as they are flung from the train, eager for the latest news of developments across the line. The Mexicans merely stand there.

Everybody is talking Villa and little else. The Columbus episode has quickened the pulse of the border and worked out a paradox. It has brought a new life to the frontier by bringing back the old. Remington died too soon. He should have seen his southwest today. Men such as he so loved to draw, spurred and booted and with six shooters on their hips, clumped along the station platforms or waved hats from behind a barbed wire fence. It is men of this type who are piloting Pershing's expedition in Mexico.

In the Pullman smoker of the Southern Pacific train speeding toward El Paso the brakeman, C. D. Lassiter, a Texan, flung back his coat and with pride displayed an old single action Colt 44.

"Babies hereabout used to be born with one of these on," he said, "and the fashion's comin' back."

This man's wife was in Columbus the night of the Villa raid, and four bullets pierced her dress. Her brother-in-law was killed.

Went For a Souvenir.

"I went down there right afterward," said the brakeman, "and I got a souvenir."

He took something out of his pocket and passed it around for inspection. It was about an inch square, and it was bone—a bit of skull from one of Villa's men.

Close to, yet far from that strip of northern Mexico into which the expeditionary force has thrust its way, the border towns from El Paso south know less of developments across the line than do others in the rest of the country. Without daily newspapers, except those that arrive from El Paso or San Antonio, they hear of events only through cowboy couriers or from train passengers.

General Funston himself, directing the expedition from San Antonio, is nearly 700 miles from the scene of action, a distance that is increasing daily if the columns push westward. Kitchener, in the war office in London, was far closer to the British front in Flanders, and to reach the trenches from England was vastly more simple than traveling from Port Sam Houston to Columbus, N. M.

General Funston denied the report that in clamping a censorship on news from the front he was feeling out the American public with a view to determining how far the army could go in the future in the matter of exacting journalistic discipline.

General Funston said the censorship would be no more rigid than that imposed at Vera Cruz at the time of the American occupation.

EX-TRAMP A MILLIONAIRE.

His Ambition Once Was to Buy $1,000,000 Worth of Beefsteak.

Leslie R. Drake of Central America walked past a Los Angeles (Cal.) park and, pointing at the benches and fountains beneath the trees, said:

"Twenty years ago I sat in that plaza on a bench, and I had neither a place to sleep nor anything to eat. I was a tramp, and as I sat there looking up at the sky I planned on how many beefsteaks I would buy if I had $1,000,000."

Mr. Drake neglected to say that, according to Dun's and Bradstreet's he is today rated at more than $1,000,000, but he did say that now he had enough money to buy all the beefsteaks he would want for the rest of his life.

Mr. Drake has made his fortune in Central America, but he does not advise others that they may hope to do likewise.

Shorn of Beard, He Lost His Reason.

Anguish caused by being shorn of a beard which had never before felt the razor's edge is believed to have been responsible for William Brosius, twenty-one years old, of Elizabeth, N. J., becoming temporarily deranged to an extent that his father caused his arrest, fearing that he might carry out threats to kill him. Despite his youth, Brosius had cultivated a long jet black beard, which his father insisted be shaved off. When the shorn youth returned a short time later friends failed to recognize him. Then William acted in such a strange manner that he was committed for examination as to his mental condition.

A Case of Misplaced Confidence

By ETHEL MARSH

The main difficulty that stands in the way of us women competing with men in business and the professions is not, I think, that we are their inferiors, but that nature constantly threatens to break down our intentions.

When a girl begins to make her preparations for a profession she has before her four years of college and another four years of study in preparation for the field in which she is about to work. To a man the care of a wife and family is a natural consequence, and his success in his profession goes hand in hand with his being a husband and father. A woman under the same circumstances feels that marriage is tantamount—in most cases—to giving up all that she has so long been making preparations for.

When I was about to prepare myself for the medical profession I fully considered this question and concluded that I must decide between making medicine my life profession and a possible marriage. I decided in favor of the profession and made a solemn resolution that I would never marry. How I failed to carry out this resolve I am about to relate. I confess I am not well pleased at the cause of my failure. Had I met a member of my own profession—an eminent surgeon, for instance—and formed a professional as well as a matrimonial partnership with him I should not possibly regret my surrender to the little god. Instead of this, I was induced to break my resolution by trickery.

I had barely commenced to practice my profession when I was called upon to visit a young man who was the oldest son of well to do parents. Indeed, the family was a very loving one, he being the idol. I was called in by his sister, next younger than he, who gave me his symptoms, which were, as she described them, threatened melancholia.

"Bertie," she said, "is so attractive to the girls that they have spoiled him. I think that if he had been born poor instead of rich and homely instead of handsome he would have chosen a profession and made a success of it. As it is, he has no object in life and is sinking into a state of mental inanition. It's such a pity, for he is the loveliest boy in the world."

This description of Albert Emerson was not calculated to interest me in his case, for it indicated that he was just the kind of a man I would despise. When I saw him there was something about him that supported his sister's description of him. I did not wonder that silly girls were disposed to make fools of themselves about him. When he looked at me out of his confidence inviting eyes and smiled his confiding smile, I was seized with an irresistible desire to serve him.

If anything was needed to convince me that he was one of those lovable men who win by frankness it was when his sister left me alone with him.

"Really, doctor," he said, "I can't permit you to waste your time and good intentions on so worthless a person as myself. I must tell you a secret. I am not ill at all. I'm in love. Nothing will cure me except a response from the woman who has engrossed my whole being. Your drugs will not be of any avail with me, but evidently you can serve me. My mind, I admit, is ailing. If you know of any medicine that will steady me mentally prescribe it and, above all, do not fail to visit me regularly. Do you believe in the effect of one mind over another to the subject mind's benefit or the reverse?"

"I certainly do."

"Well, from the moment I first saw you I felt the effect of your mentality. It may be that this love I bear is a symptom. If so your mentality may cure my body, and that may drive away this craving for the woman who has absorbed me. I beg of you, don't desert me. Come and see me often."

I was at this time much interested in the cure of disease by mental or spiritual influence and was caught by the way the young man put his case. It would interest me to prove that his diagnosis of his case was correct. I would give him the benefit of my mental power over him.

This intention was facilitated by his family. Instead of being received by them as a physician I was treated as a friend. I did not attempt to exert any influence over the patient. I simply permitted whatever influence I possessed to act upon him. He seemed to grow better gradually. One day his sister asked me to ride with him and her. I accepted. Then I rode out with him alone.

I had been visiting Albert Emerson thus semiprofessionally for several months when one day he made a confession to me. I was the woman he loved and had loved long before I had visited him. But this confession was not made until my wings had been so far clipped that I could not fly away.

In other words, I had been trapped. The worst of it was that I did not wish to be untrapped. I had been gradually absorbed by a man who I had not dreamed wanted me or I wanted.

And now, ten years after our marriage, he has further confessed that he won me simply because he had heard that I had decided never to marry.

I am ashamed through all my nature to have loved so slight a thing.

But, all the same, I love my husband and my children. My profession has long ago faded away from me.

Birds Minus Wings and Tail.

The lowest form of bird life which exists is believed to be the kiwi, or Apteryx mantelli of New Zealand. It is so scarce however, that scientists consider themselves lucky to get a specimen in any condition. It is without wings or tail, its legs are short, but very strong, and are used for digging.

Ibsen's Poor Pathology.

The Lancet takes a fall out of Ibsen in seriously questioning the truth of the theme of his "Ghosts." It doubts very much whether such cases as that of Oswald, in which the awful disease is inherited, are anything but terrible exceptions instead of being typical, as Ibsen would have us suppose.

Europeans Are Book Buyers.

In the United States only one person in 1,300 buys a book in the course of a year, while in Great Britain it is one in 3,800; in France it is about the same; in Germany and Japan it is rather better, and in Switzerland it is one in 872. Cheaper books, in paper covers, account for some of this difference; but, whatever the cause, it remains true that the Europeans buy twice as many books per capita as we do—Atlantic Monthly.

"WILD OATS" ATTRACTION AT CRYSTAL MONDAY

Roy Wilson, a youth, owes gambling debts to Graham Madison, an architect of doubtful morals. Roy also forms an attachment for Madison's mistress, Cleo, thus involving himself more deeply with Madison. Roy's father is a competing architect, and his sister, Jessie, is the sweetheart of Carew, Wilson's chief consulting engineer.

Wilson and Madison prepare to submit bids for a railway contract, and Madison compels Roy to steal his father's bid. That night Carew asks for Jessie's hand and is refused by Wilson on the grounds of Jessie's youth. When the loss of the plans is discovered, Wilson accuses Carew, and discharges him. Meanwhile Roy travels a fast pace with Cleo, of whom Madison, having gained his end, has tired, and when she fancies an expensive necklace, Roy, after trying to borrow the money, rifles the family safe. Unluckily, Carew calls at this moment to see Jessie and to show her a letter he had received from Madison. In leaving, Carew fails to take with him the envelope bearing Madison's name, and Wilson finds it. The shock of the robbery kills the old man, who dies with the envelope clutched in his hand. This, and the word of the butler who had seen Carew leaving the house, weaves a chain of circumstantial guilt. After the theft, Roy hurries to Cleo and offers her the spoils of his shame, but she sends him home and he arrives a moment after Carew, who had been apprehended and brought back. Roy finally breaks down, confessing.

This exciting drama will be shown at the Crystal theatre Monday, Apr. 10.

GENERAL TOO BUSY TO SEND DOCTOR TO HIS DYING SON

Verdun Chief Did Not Stop When Told of His Boy's Wounds.

A most pathetic incident of the battle of Verdun has just been reported. It begins with the following telephone conversation:

"Hello! Is that the farm? Who is speaking?"

"This is the post commander talking."

"How many men have you there?"

"Fifteen."

"Leave your senior sergeant in charge of the redoubt. Take eight men and cut off a strong German patrol which has just entered the wood, but look out for a cross fire. Report to me immediately on your return."

This conversation occurred at mid night. An hour later the German patrol had been annihilated, and the picket returned to the redoubt, carrying a lieutenant mortally wounded. The post commander sprang to the telephone:

"Hello! The coup succeeded, but Lieutenant X is dying. Can you send a doctor?"

An exclamation of grief came from the other end of the line. There was a pause, then an impassive voice was heard saying:

"Never mind the doctor. Run immediately to the dugouts. The Germans are about to attack. I am sending you three platoons of re-enforcements."

A pause ensued, and then the same voice resumed in broken tones:

"Hello! Are you still there? Kiss Lieutenant X for me. He is my son Goodby."

SHOOT AWAY $24,000,000.

Tremendous Cost of War Illustrated by the Battle of Verdun.

If the estimate of 2,000,000 shells is approximately the number fired in the great Verdun battle the financial outlay to the contending armies for artillery ammunition alone has been at least $20,000,000 to $24,000,000.

This estimate of army ordnance experts is based on the theory that the bulk of the fighting has been done with 75 centimeter field guns. Inasmuch as the Germans have made use of a considerable number of large field pieces and siege guns, the cost in artillery ammunition probably has been considerably more than $24,000,000.

As the caliber of a gun increases the cost per round multiplies rapidly. The huge German guns which demolished the Liege fortifications and shelled Dunkirk from a distance of twenty miles or more hurl projectiles that cost many hundreds of dollars, the exact figures not being known.

In addition to the enormous cost of artillery ammunition used in the Verdun fight, many millions of rounds of small arms ammunition have been consumed, the outlay for hospital service has been excessively high, while the loss of effective fighting units has been enormous on both sides.

VALUE OF BABY IS $90.

"Aged Person Becomes a Negative Quantity," Declares Professor.

What is a baby worth?

Professor Irving T. Fisher of Yale, urging the adoption of a bill for compulsory social insurance for workmen, told the committee on social welfare at the statehouse, in Boston, that he estimated the value of a baby to be $90.

"And I estimate the value of an adult to be $1,000," said the professor. "The value of an aged person, by computations under the proposed system, becomes a negative quantity."

"The proposed bill will bring preventive medicine into every home. Last year there were 630,000 unnecessary deaths in the United States. The bill also will distribute the enormous burden of sickness so it will not entirely overwhelm a worker when it comes."

Mr. Thagard feels that he is particularly well fitted for the office through his experience for the past four years as bank examiner.

WINTER VISITOR DIED THIS MORNING IN ALLANDALE

Mrs. Isabel Hook Turton, wife of George L. Turton, of Brooklyn, N. Y., died this morning in Allandale where the couple had been spending the season. The deceased was 58 years of age. The remains were brought to the Bingham & Maley company undertaking establishment and will be forwarded from this city at 8:33 a. m., next Monday morning for interment at Brooklyn. The body will be accompanied north by the bereaved husband.

Extinct Species.

What has become of the old-fashioned man who considered it a distinction to have a tooth pulled without taking anything to dull the pain?—Topeka Capital.

Baffling English Names.

We may puzzle our brains over the tongue-twisting names which France and Russia have given to some of their towns, but England herself furnishes a few quite as dazzling as that of Przemyśl, Hurstmonceux, for instance, is pronounced Her-so; Kirkcudbright, Kir-coo-bree; Daventry, Dantry; Leominster, Lemster, and Evesham E-Sham.

ELKS INSTALLED NEW OFFICERS

The principal feature of the meeting Friday evening of Daytona Lodge No. 1141, B. P. O. Elks, was the installation of officers and all newly elected officers were installed with the exception of the exalted ruler, F. N. Conrad, and the treasurer, F. J. Niver, who were unable to be present because of the meeting of the State Bankers' association at the Clarendon hotel.

The officers installed were as follows:

Esteemed Leading Knight, Lew Smith.

Esteemed Loyal Knight, Scheffel Wright.

Esteemed Lecturing Knight, E. H. Brown.

Secretary, B. B. Baggett.

Tyler, L. D. Kipp.

Trustee for three years, Geo. F. Crouch.

The appointive offices have not yet been filled.

One candidate was initiated, Geo. H. Ranslow, of the Clarendon drug store, who expects to leave before the next meeting of the lodge.

Following the initiation and the installation of officers, the members and visiting Elks enjoyed the usual social session and refreshments.

Too Hard on the Gossips.

A New York inventor has found a way of keeping everybody on a party telephone line, except the party called, from hearing a word of the conversation. But he needn't expect the company to utilize his invention. It would ruin its business.

GERMAN REPLY TO SUSSEX NOTE IS EXPECTED MONDAY

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Germany's reply to the American inquiry regarding the responsibility for the attack on the Sussex is expected not later than Monday. Ambassador Gerard cables that he expects to receive the reply today. No intimation of its contents will be given out until the full text is received.

President Wilson has fully decided that Germany must give an absolute pledge that attacks on unarmed neutral and belligerent vessels will immediately cease and show that the pledge will be observed, else diplomatic relations will be broken off. This action may be taken at a cabinet meeting next Tuesday. War is not contemplated. The United States will simply take the position that it cannot maintain relations with a country which has violated its pledges.
